Aperio Intelligence cordially invites you to our upcoming webinar:

The race to secure rare earths: what will higher sustainability standards mean for investors in critical minerals?

Wednesday 27 January 2021

13:00 - 14:00 GMT

As the world's largest economies transition to a greener future, investors and stakeholders across the rare earth value chain are facing increased legal, regulatory and reputational pressure to adopt higher standards of sustainability and ensure the traceability of their minerals.

The EU's new action plan on critical raw materials was launched in September 2020 with a focus on responsible supply chains. Meanwhile, parallel initiatives in the US will likely see Washington exert greater influence in this area. How are these forces likely to shape supply chains in the sector and what are the practical implications for companies and investors?

To discuss the evolving regulatory landscape and broader initiatives to support responsible supply chains across the minerals sector, Aperio Intelligence is delighted to invite you to a webinar and Q&A with our expert panel:

- Roberto García Martínez: CEO, Eurobattery Minerals
- George Donne: Senior Investment Professional at Greenstone Resources, a private equity fund specialising in the mining and metals sector
- Ludivine Wouters: Governance and policy consultant and Managing Partner of Latitude Five, an independent investment and advisory firm focusing on mining in Africa

This event will be chaired by Simon Jennings, Head of Environmental, Social and Governance at Aperio Intelligence.
